SHIPPING BOARD FOR COAL
Washington, Jan. 21.—Prices charged the shipping board for bunker coal in the open market during the past year are under investigation for evidence of profiteering in violation of the Lever act, department of justice officials said today.

The investigation was begun, officials explained, at the request of Chairman Benson of the shipping board, who submitted to the department a statement of the board's bunker coal purchases in the open market during 1920 with the suggestion that the legality of some of the prices charged would warrant inquiry.

College Maid Is Accused
Employed as a maid at Blackstone hall at Connecticut college, Lillian Campbell was arrested at the college in New London late Thursday afternoon on the charge of living with Foster Brooks, a man to whom she is not married. Brooks was also placed under arrest by Sergeant Nelson Smith and both will be held for trial. Brooks is alleged to have brought the Campbell woman to New London from Rhode Island and he may be held for violation of the Mann act. The couple are alleged to have been living together in New London since September.

The secret of their relations came to the front when another woman appeared in New London and asserted that she was Brooks' wife. This led to an investigation and finally to the arrest.
